

ABSTRACT

Relatively large (for example: 1/4 inch x 1/4 inch), fragile particles of a baked cookie product are a significant ingredient in a cold formed food bar product. The food bar product, which in addition to cookie pieces comprises sugar and filler fat, and optional ingredients such as puffed wheat, puffed rice and nuts, is formed by rolling the mixed ingredients into a slab, slicing the slab into ropes, cutting the ropes into conveniently sized pieces and finally enrobing with a chocolate or chocolate compound.
